Yāja, a Brahmarshi, brother of Upayāja. § 218b (Draupadī-sumbhava): Drupada saw the two brothers of Kāçyapa's race, Y. and Upayāja. He courted Upayāja and asked him to perform a sacrifice, by which he might obtain a son who might slay Droṇa, and promised him an arbuda of kine. But Upayāja refused. Drupada once more began to pay homage to him, and after a year Upayāja said that his elder brother, Y., once had taken up a fruit without inquiring of the purity of the spot, and had, in the house of his preceptor, used to eat the remains of other people's feasts; he would entertain no scruples. Describing the might of Droṇa ("Droṇa is also skilled in the Brahmāstra, his bow is six aratnis long") Drupada promised Y. to give him eight ayutas (cf. v. 6385: "an arbuda") of kine. Y. consented and prevailed upon Upayāja to assist him. Upayāja then spoke to Drupada of everything required for the sacrifice: I, 167, 6362 (°opayājau Brahmarshī), 6376 (°syāçramam), 6377, 6386.—§ 218 (do.): I, 167, 6390, 6391 (6392), 6393, 6405, 6406 (in the sacrifice which Y. and Upayāja performed for Drupada, Dhṛṣṭadyumna and Draupadī were born from the sacrificial fire).—§ 306 (Anudyaṭap.): II, 80, 2662 (°opayājatapasā lebhe putram sa pāvakāt, sc. Drupada, all. to § 218).
